Lindbergh's Flight from New York to Paris First Turn in Tide

ROCKEFELLER GIFT HELPS

Relations Between Two Countries Now Are Best Since Armistice

Washington.—The high water mark in the relations between France and the United States since the armistice has been reached. Official Washington is pleased and happy. Something indescribably companionable has taken the place of the awkward and embarrassing situation that has prevailed in the last two years.

The turn in the tide first came with the remarkable flight of Charles Lindbergh to Paris. This has been followed by the announcement of a gift of $1,000,000 by John D. Rockefeller, Jr., to help conserve the historic monuments of France. Now an American committee in Paris has started a fund for the families of the unfortunate French fliers. Deep sentiment which has been so characteristic of the relations between French and American people is being shown on both sides of the Atlantic once more, almost superseding for the moment the harshness which cropped out in the handling of the war debt problem.

Even if the United States were ever to consider some kind of readjustment or revision of war debts, a mood such as has now developed would have been an essential forerunner of any such step. Indeed, American officials have felt for some time that the discussion in the French press have given the debt problem an emphasis which it did not deserve and that the American government could be relied upon to deal fairly with every circumstance in the future as it arose.

FRENCH PAPERS HELP
The fact that the French newspapers have been filled with laudatory comments of America is expected to furnish a better background than ever before on which a mutual understanding of the difficulties of the debt question can be built. The affection exhibited by France toward Lindbergh has impressed people on this side of the Atlantic that stories of a deep-seated anti-American feeling were far from accurate. Instead of an atmosphere of doubt and suspicion about Franco-American relations, there has been substituted a feeling of confidence. And when the debt settlement comes up before Congress next December the chances of its adoption with a minimum of debate can be said to have improved materially. In fact, some new plan for the funding of the debt may be offered by the French next winter which will permanently put the relations between the United States and France on a satisfactory basis.

The difficulty in the past has been the unwillingness of some French statesmen to deal with the problem at all, and the efforts of certain French politicians to make the people believe that payment would never be necessary had that large indemnities would be forthcoming from Germany. The possibility is being discussed here that France may voluntarily pay off the debt which she contracted after the armistice, borrowing it from her own people in the form of long-term bonds. This might lead to a rearrangement of the payments on the debt contracted during the war. In any event the improvement of the fiscal position of France is a factor which has been noticed with gratification at Washington.

The main thing accomplished in the last ten days has been the change in the impression of America received by the French people through their press. There has never been any change on this side of the Atlantic in the esteem in which the French people have been held, but it has been hard to keep the French people convinced of this in the face of the adverse comments of the politicians in Paris. The Rockefeller gift is typical of the spirit that individual Americans have shown toward France throughout the reconstruction period. And the sum total of all these acts is to assist the two governments in developing a kinder attitude toward political problems.

Land at Croydon Field

London.—(AP)—This week of the English year is always known as Derby week, but it has a new name in 1927—"Lindbergh and Derby week." The arrival here of the intrepid Atlantic flier brought to a fever point the admiration already bestowed on him and his achievement, and his doings here were destined to share with Wednesday's turf classic the derby's interest of a vast public which admires sporting spirit, whether displayed on the turf or in the air.

Judging from the reception given Captain Lindbergh when he came to earth after a 200-mile cross-channel flight from Brussels at 10 o'clock Sunday night, his four days in London promise to be even more strenuous than the seven days that followed his great flight from New York to Paris. A reception by King George and a trip to Epsom down to see the derby in the company of no less a personage than the prince of Wales are highlights in the program that has been arranged in his honor.

CROWD TOPS RECORD

Never before in English history has such a large and enthusiastic crowd assembled to greet an individual as was at the Croydon Airfield when the western aviator completed his 2 1/2-hour trip from the Belgian capital. The police estimated that more than 100,000 persons were gathered. They shouted, they cheered, they whistled, and when the Spirit of St. Louis touched the earth, it was immediately surrounded.

"For God's sake look out for my machine." These were the words of Lindbergh, before he hoped out of the plane. The excited bobbies tried in vain to keep the excited throngs back, but they pressed even closer.

The plane did not escape damage, but British airmen after examining it, told the visiting flier that it would be very easy to make the slight repairs necessary.

When the police finally got the hero into an automobile, the crowds pushed all the more in a struggle to get a glimpse of him. He was taken to the civil aviation office where the door had to be locked and bolted. The crowds became so insistent that Commander Perrin, secretary of the Royal Aero club, after getting a promise of good behavior from the people conducted "Lindy" to the observation tower where he was given an ovation with much waving of American and British flags. Numerous persons were hurt, but none seriously in the crush at Croydon.

INTO MEMORIAL UNION BUILDING AT "U"

Henry A. Huber, Lieutenant Governor, Delivers Address of Acceptance

Madison.—(AP)—"Because they dared, because they died. We and our nation live. Our liberty, our hope, our pride. Were girls that they could give; Ored of many wars, who fought With spirits high and pure, The noble structure that you wrought Shall evermore endure."

With this poem and a brief address, Lieutenant Governor Henry A. Huber Monday accepted the partly-constructed Memorial Union building on the campus of the University of Wisconsin, for the state of Wisconsin, in honor of all Wisconsin citizens who served in all the country's wars.

"In these halls will be freedom of conscience; freedom of thought and devotion to the ideals of liberty and justice for which its brave men went forth to battle," said Mr. Huber. The building was accepted as a student center for the children of Wisconsin citizens and for a center for the children of Wisconsin citizens and for a center of University, city and state activity.

Mr. Huber said further:

"Into this Memorial Union building, the corner stone of which we lay today, will be cemented the hopes and the aspirations of the young men of Wisconsin who during the next century will come here in an ever widening phalanx to enjoy the educational blessings of this great state."

"Because of the tender sentiments which shall permeate this rising structure, every block of granite and every cornice will be burnished rich with the realism of a devoted Wisconsin people, who have made this state what it is today. For Wisconsin's pride is her well educated citizenship."

"Other buildings shall rise on the campus. They will serve utilitarian purposes. But this structure which is to ascend from this earth will be commemorative of Wisconsin's spirit in a special manner."

"When the bugle of Civil war sounded, it was heard in the class rooms of this institution and so many answered its call for service that its classes were nearly depopulated."

Fuel Shortage Cause Of Landing By Italian Ace

Horta, Island of Fayal, Azores.—(AP)—Commander Francesco de Pinedo, Italian aviator, arrived here Monday morning on the Italian steamer Superga, which had his seaplane, the Portuguese schooner Infant Santa Maria II, in tow.

Unplanned by his forced landing in the Atlantic, he would resume his four-continent journey, which began from Casablanca on Feb. 12, and has carried him to Africa, South America, and the United States.

Interruption of the attempted hop from Trepassey, Newfoundland, to this port last Monday, the commander said, was caused by adverse weather conditions. The start from Trepassey was made in moderate weather, but the plane encountered a blanket of fog, and for 400 miles had to fly at a high altitude to get above the mist.

At this height a strong contrary wind was encountered, slowing the speed of the machine and increasing the consumption of fuel. When about 270 miles from Flores Island, the most westerly of the Azores group, the Portuguese schooner Infant Santa Maria II, in tow, was sighted. Being short of fuel and fearing he would be unable to reach Horta, de Pinedo decided to come down.

The fliers were picked up by the schooner and the plane was towed for three days, when the Superga boat into sight and took the fliers aboard, also taking over the tow of the seaplane. The steamer proceeded very slowly to avoid further damage to the plane. Commander de Pinedo expressed deep gratitude to the assistance rendered both by the Infant Santa and the schooner.

The steamer arrived here at 6:20 Monday morning, and the seaplane was moved to the breakwater. The flier and his companions had a great reception.

2 FASCISTS KILLED ON THEIR WAY TO PARADE

New York.—(AP)—Two black-shirted followers of the fascists on their way to a march in a Memorial day parade were killed Monday by unknown assailants at 155th and Third Ave.

The victims, Joseph Carisi, a tailor, and Nicholas Amoroso, printer, were stabbed and shot. Their assailants, witnesses told the police, were red ties, signifying their allegiance to the Italian nationalist party.

UNPREPAREDNESS IS BREEDER OF WARS, SAYS LEGION HEAD

Organization Desires Peace But Prefers to Be Ready, He Points Out

Kenosha—(O)—Unpreparedness is a breeder of wars, Howard P. Savage, national commander of the American Legion declared in an address prepared for delivery before Wisconsin reserve officers association here Saturday. He explained the National Defense Act and the Legion's stand in urging the "adequate defense" of America.

Commander Savage stated that the American Legion Finance convention in September "is now certain of success;" that community service, the main objective of the Legion this year, has progressed to the extent that the endeavor of 10,000 Legion posts to perform some outstanding task for their communities is nearing accomplishment, and that the Legion has grown rapidly in membership until it is now 50,000 larger than at this time a year ago.

"Great as are these efforts—and I admit of none greater save care of our disabled, which is being done—there are other things the Legion must do for its country, because out of its experience the Legion has gained wisdom along certain lines," he said. "And it has wisdom about anything it is about war. The Legion knows war, and knows it first hand. It knows what a machine gun sounds like when death ripples whistle through the air at so many per second. It knows what a shell sounds like when it explodes and sends a thousand fragments whirling in search of bodies to rend and kill. It has heard the snarl of lead and tortured bodies it has seen its dead on many battlefields.

"And knowing all this the Legion wants no more of it. To the extent that its members pray God to spare this world another holocaust like the one that tore at our very existence for four years, The Legion is a pacifist. But, my friends, it is not an extreme pacifist; and it does not advocate disarmament.

"The Balkanization of Europe, the conflicting national aspirations and the economic troubles which still beset the world, all make for bitter controversy and possible war.

"Certain people say that the Legion grossly tiresome by constantly harping on the need of adequate defense. Many have in fact said that because of our emphasis on this particular question we have become jingos. But that is not the truth.

"The Legion sincerely desires peace. Its members no longer ago than ten years, suffered privation, exhaustion, mutilation, suffered indeed mental scars that most of them will take to their graves. They have earned the right to speak with authority on the subject of national defense.

"If another war should break it will take these men and their children. And it is not the intention of the Legion to permit its manhood to go unprepared against an enemy armed with all the deadly armament that human ingenuity can devise.

"Therefore, let us have a reasonable preparedness, a sensible program which will be more than an insurance against war, will be indeed an insurance against death of untrained, unprepared soldiers.

"The Legion does not shut its eyes to fact; and it does not believe that another war is not possible. It was because it realized that Utopia is still a dream that the Legion in 1929 got behind what was then known as the Army Reorganization Act, and helped to have it made into the law known as the National Defense Act. That act was and is a military policy, the first one this nation ever had. It is a rational measure, democratic in

PUBLIC UTILITY ACCOUNTANTS TO MEET JUNE 17-18

Many Prominent Speakers Are Listed on Program for Annual Convention

Wausau—(O)—Public utility accountants will hold their annual convention in Green Bay, June 17 and 18, Frank R. Eckert, Wausau, chairman of the Accounting section of the Wisconsin Utilities association has announced.

James H. McGillan, mayor of Green Bay, will be the only speaker on the program whose subject will not be related to accounting work. He will address the convention of "Public Relations Between The Public Utility and the Community." L. E. Gettle, chairman of the Railway commission will talk on "Valuation as Affected by Recent Court Decisions."

Speakers and their subjects at the first morning session will be:

C. R. Phenicle, Green Bay, address of welcome; R. E. Moody Milwaukee, "Review of N. E. L. A. Accounting Section's convention"; M. Zas, Milwaukee, "Proper Distribution of Costs in Automobiles, Trucks and Transportation Equipment."

At the first afternoon session C. B. Boulet, Milwaukee will talk on "The Accountant's Place in the Safety Program"; H. P. Taylor, Green Bay, "Employee's Education"; Robert J. Johnson, Milwaukee, "Accounting Problems in Connection with Industrial Gas and House Heating Customers."

The second morning will be opened with a round table discussion on "Accounting Problems in Connection with Bus Operation." Warren Montgomery Madison, will lead the debate. J. E. Gray, Madison, will read a paper on "Apportioning Expenses Between Merchandising and Operation." Sam R. Hatch, Milwaukee, has for his subject "Accounting Treatment of Property Retired." Previous to Mayor McGillan's address the section will elect officers for the new year.

The program will be concluded in the afternoon with an inspection trip through the New Bayside generating station and the offices.

A dinner and dance will be held at the Door County Country club in Sturgeon Bay the first evening.

FUNERAL DIRECTORS BUY HARBECK HOUSE

Sager-Bronson Mortuary has purchased the Henry J. Harbeck home at 224 N. Oneida-st and will remodel the building for a funeral home. It will be opened early in June. The deal was completed last week by Carroll and Carroll Real Estate company. Ralph Gee, who has purchased the Emil Dahlman home at 321 W. Third-st, will take possession of his new house sometime in June. A lot owned by Mr. Dahlman on Third-st between W. Story and W. Spencer-st was purchased by Mrs. Happy Sherburne.

R. S. Thomas, Oshkosh, advance man for an indoor circus, who had been freed on his own recognition under $100 bonds after pleading not guilty to a charge of obtaining food under false pretenses, was released from his bond Friday by Judge Theodore Berg after he had settled the account. Thomas was arrested several weeks ago on complaint of Sander's restaurant.

In the complaint it was alleged that Thomas received credit after telling the cashier he was waiting for funds which would arrive in a few days. When his bill reached $11 further credit was refused and he was asked to settle. Failing to do so, he was arrested.

This Day In Memory Of—

MEMORIAL Day is in tribute to those gone, to the good they gave when here on earth, to the sweet world we have because they lived. It is a day of Reverence, and yet of rejoicing—for having had them and having what their life contributed, which is greatly more than Memory.

It is a day of rejoicing, knowing their reward is granted, that Perpetual Reward which is so Bountiful, so Gleaming, so joyful and so Endless.

And as we bow in Prayer this day, as we stoop to place the wreath upon their bed, as we hear the Echo of the Drum and Bugle, and the Boom of distant Cannon—we indeed have reason to Rejoice, with the deeper meaning which Memorial Day holds.

20 STUDENTS ENTER MENTAL CONTESTS

Competitive Exams to be Conducted in Spelling, Arithmetic, Penmanship

Twenty rural school students, one from each town in Outagamie-co, took part in the spelling, arithmetic and penmanship contests at the county courthouse Saturday morning under the supervision of A. G. Meating, county superintendent of schools. The pupil receiving the highest percentage will represent the county at the annual state contests at Milwaukee during the state fair next fall.

They participated in a 100-word writing spelling examination, series of penmanship examples and an arithmetic examination. The latter test included examples in multiplication, subtraction, addition, long division, percentage, fractions, and calculating.

The competitions were chosen at preliminary tests recently held in each town. Each school in the town entered a contestant in the preliminary contests.

KAUKAUNA-LITTLE CHUTE-KIMBERLY

PHIL ZWICK BEATS
SANTIAGO IN HARD
CARD AT CLEVELANDFormer Kaukauna Youth
Knocks Opponent to Canvas
Five Times During Fight

Kaukauna—Phil Zwick won a great battle from Armando Santiago of Cuba in an eight round semi-windup to the La Barba-La Morte fight card at Cleveland, O., Friday evening, when he knocked the Cuban down five times. Santiago recently beat Don Davis who won previously from the speedy Eddie Shea. The Cuban was a favorite to beat Zwick.

One Cleveland newspaper carried the following account of the fight: "One of the greatest scraps of the season was the eight-round encounter involving Phil Zwick, young fighter of the fast and lusty stock, and Armando Santiago, the highly touted Cuban."

"Santiago, the popular 'pig to win' was floored as he hopped out of his corner at the first bell. Before that opening round was through, Zwick's right had popped the brown boy to the canvas twice again, the first time for a count of five, then for seven. In the third, Zwick dropped Santiago for seven and another count of nine. The bell saved Santiago at that point, coming, as it did, when he was rising, groggy and goofy. He stayed up by some mysterious means or other through the fourth and fifth heats, then to rally and put on a strong valiant finish. It was a pretty victory for Zwick, who had generally been picked to finish a rather poor second. The young man is a whale of a hitter. If he can brush up in other departments of the game he'll go a long way. Phil weighed but 123 to the Cuban's 126."

The sport page of the same issue of that Cleveland paper carried three action pictures of the Zwick-Santiago fracas giving the space to those two men rather than the principals in the windup. The first picture showed Santiago down for the count of two in the first round before the clang of the opening bell had died away. Santiago was nearly out in the action shown in the second picture. It was after the Cuban had taken a count of nine. The third picture was taken later in the fight when Santiago and Zwick both went down in a double slip.

MANY TOURISTS ARE STOPPING AT PARK

Kaukauna—Tourists again are availing themselves of accommodations offered at the Kaukauna Tourist park. The past month found many stopping at the park while one family from Chicago has remained at the park during the entire day. They left early last week for the north where they plan on spending the summer.

The north side street department has made necessary repairs on the cedar road leading to the park and Thomas Reardon, north street commissioner, said Saturday that the park was ready for the tourists. The two camp stoves have been repaired and now are in good condition.

The park has appealed to many tourists because it is located on a particularly picturesque part of the Fox river. Markers directing the way to the park have been placed on the principal highways leading into the city.

REPORT LARGE SALE OF POPPIES SATURDAY

Kaukauna—The American Legion auxiliary reports a successful sale of poppies on Saturday although a complete report is not available at this time. Workers started selling poppies on the main streets at 6 o'clock Saturday morning and continued until early evening. Many school children assisted in the work. The complete report is expected to be ready by Tuesday.

NO PIGEONS COMPLETE
BIG RACE FROM IOWA

Kaukauna—None of the pigeons shipped to Britt, Ia., Friday evening for Sunday's 400 mile race of the Kaukauna Pigeon club had returned home at a late hour Monday morning. It was believed that rain caused the birds to lose their way. Loft owners were still hopeful that some might get through. More than a hundred birds were shipped to Britt.

Kaukauna—Prof. F. M. Ingler of Lawrence college delivered the principal address at the Memorial day services at Eroka Memorial Methodist church Sunday morning. The professor compared the days of the Civil war with those of the World War. He said that although material conditions had changed from time of the Civil war until the World conflict, American patriotism remained the same. The professor also touched upon the subject of education, showing the need of schools and the advantages derived from them.

Francis Grogan, winner of third place in the state oratorical contest at Madison, delivered Lincoln's Gettysburg address. Special music was presented by the organist, Mrs. May Parks Johnson, and the choir.

Members of the American Legion, the Legion Auxiliary, the G. A. R. and the Women's Relief Corps, paraded from the Legion building to the church.

Graves of war veterans were decorated by the four organizations at services held in the cemeteries Monday morning.

POSTPONE BALL GAME
BECAUSE OF RAINS

Kaukauna—Rain caused a postponement of Sunday's scheduled baseball battle between Neenah and the Fox River Valley league leaders, and Kaukauna. The grounds were in bad shape because of the rainy weather during the past few days.

Conditions were in bad shape because of the rainy weather during the Conditions were such Monday morning that it was believed that Kaukauna could travel to Oshkosh to meet the Shawano City team in the Decoration day battle. This will be the first time that Kaukauna has met Oshkosh on a baseball field in recent years. Oshkosh won the league pennant in 1926 and has practically the same team this year. Kaukauna and Oshkosh each have a win over Green Bay. It will be a close battle, according to advance dope. Gertz is ready to toe the mound for Kaukauna and with good support behind him should win. The remainder of the Kaukauna lineup will be the same as that in the last two games.

HUNDREDS OBSERVE
MEMORIAL SUNDAY
IN NEENAH THEATRE

A. W. Ganfield, President of Carroll College, Gives Principal Address

Neenah—Hundreds of people observed Memorial Sunday here Sunday morning at Saxe Negah theatre in spite of bad weather. The four surviving veterans of the Civil War veterans of the Indian, Philippine and the World wars attended in groups, as did the Legion. James P. Hawley, post-American Legion, the military organizations and societies.

The exercises opened with the advancement of the colors to the tune of "The Star Spangled Banner," played on the organ by Elbert Smith of Appleton. The audience remained standing during the exercises and during the invocation by the Rev. E. C. Kolath of Immanuel church, and the singing of "America."

H. L. Plummer of Appleton, post-commander of the Wisconsin department, talking on "The American Legion Ideals," gave a review of the Legion's preamble. The Legion stands for God and Country, and seeks to promote justice, freedom and democracy, he said. Roll was called of those who lost their lives in the wars, and a poppy was placed in a vase by Miss Helen Hawley for each deceased soldier as his name was called by F. J. Schneller. This was followed by the sounding taps by Robert Ebert, post-musician.

A. W. Ganfield, president of Carroll college, said in part "monumental history is as old as the spiritual experiences of men. In the valley of the ancient Nile there crumbles into dust the ancient pyramids that the story of the achievement of a master race in ancient time and clime."

"On the banks of swift or sluggish flowing streams and in the capitol cities of Europe remain the monuments and tablets that refresh our memory of the achievements of other races and other days. Our own young Republic boasts her Bunker Hill, Yorktown and scores of other monuments adorning our National and state capitals."

DAY HAS SIGNIFICANCE

"Memorial days are at once older and more significant than monuments of wood and of stone. Perhaps no tribe, no clan and no nation that doth not by some Memorial Day signalize the birthday of the founder or discoverer of the state, or some victory in war; some advance in liberty; some discovery in science or some achievements in the arts of peace. Memorial days have their significance and worth only in that proportion and to that degree in which they inspire us to a more intelligent devotion and a more sincere consecration to our present and our common task. It were a little worth that we strew flowers on the graves of the sacred dead on this Memorial day if in turn we do not feel a more earnest urge to maintain the ideals of the institutions of the Republic which we love and for which our fathers and companions made much heroic sacrifice."

"On the Fourth of July we heartily engage in the firing of crackers and the booming of cannon, but these expressions of our enthusiasm are no fitting tribute to the courage and the service, the heroism and the bravery of the sacred dead. If today you and I are inspired with somewhat the same patriotism for the country that we love and somewhat the same loyalty to the ideals that we cherish as moved the men of '76, the boys of '61 or the lads of '17, then is our memorial service rich and worthy, indeed."

"We do not think the same thoughts that our fathers did think. Nations like individuals grow by steps and stages in their growth. The first significant period of American national life may be dated from 1763 to 1815.

"In that period the founding fathers of our Republic had a very clear and distinct issue before their minds. It was their task to persuade the men and women living along side the Atlantic ocean and to convince the nations on the other side of the sea that they had a right to become an independent sovereign state. This task involved a strenuous and unhappy war but the results were in due time achieved. Your sons and mine will never be called to the plans of strife to maintain the rights of America as an independent state. Everyone with an American as well as everyone without now frankly confesses that we are and shall remain an indestructible union of Indissoluble states. The fact was clearly brought out in the second step of our American national life which began in 1861 and continued to 1877.

"The third period of our story began in 1898. New problems of state, new problems in our country, new questions were raised in the minds of men. This task was also solved in the formation of a new state, pertaining to our country, Wisconsin, and our second step. We have been absorbed in the growth of the newly formed national life, we by the force of the times, were compelled through the experience of the first four periods of our national life, to bring to the surface of our national life, the problems of state, which are arising to determine the fate of our beautiful, democratic, nation, to determine our state to another world of states."

THINK PROBLEMS OUT
"A few fundamental principles are that no problem ever arises which cannot be solved; that no question can be answered until it is solved; that postponement of problems does not solve them; that the proper answer to a problem is the proper solution to the problem, and thus enables us to profit by the advance of mankind. Let us, then, as frankly acknowledge that we have thousands of times better solved our problems through our own efforts than through the efforts of others."

"Therefore, now you of us who are today in positions of responsibility in the bottoms of the hills, the valleys, the fields, the cities and the towns, the waves and sweethearts, the sons and

NEW BRIDGES ARE OPENED SATURDAY
BY MAYOR, CLERK

Structures Will Be Dedicated at Formal Exercises on June 11

Neenah—The new cement bridges over the Fox river, and Commercial street with Wisconsin-ave to N. Water-st. were officially opened to traffic Saturday afternoon by Mayor J. M. Zemlock and H. J. Zemlock, city clerk.

Just one year ago May 23 the work was started in preparing the improvement which has resulted in one of the finest cement bridges in the state. In place of the old iron narrow structure, a bridge 55 feet wide, of solid cement, and with an eight foot walk on either side, has been erected. The street now runs in a straight line with the bridges, the jogs formerly caused by the narrow bridges having been straightened out. The ornamental lighting system is to be placed on the bridges and N. Commercial within the next few days to be in readiness for the dedication on June 11.

Obstacles encountered after work was started, continued more than a month longer than was expected. An entirely new sewer system was placed the entire length of the street, the curve in the tracks of the Wisconsin Traction, Light, Heat and Power company was taken out, the entire intersection at Wisconsin-ave and Commercial was cemented, grades for sidewalks had to be given to accommodate the several properties along the street and walks were constructed the entire length of the improved street. None of this work was not contained in the original plans. All that remains is the erection of ornamental lights and the bronze tablets containing the state highway commission members' names, the one one containing the council's names, and that of the American Legion designating the bridges in memory of soldiers who died in the wars.

MORE MOTOR DEATHS

Upward the toll of death because of motor vehicle accidents continues to go. Seventy-eight cities, reporting to the department of commerce, listed about 700 more fatalities in the twelve months that ended April 23 than in the preceding twelve. In these population centers alone people are being killed at the rate of about twenty a day. For the nation as a whole the figure is considerably larger than fifty. This has been true for three years. And instead of getting better the record is getting worse.

It is easy enough to place the blame on narrow streets, imperfect highways, the increasing use of automobiles and other physical hazards. Certainly the nation has not caught up with the traffic requirements that this expanded form of transportation demands. The point is that motorists must accept conditions as they exist and exercise unusual caution. It will be years even under favorable circumstances before many communities or states, or perhaps any, can supply all the facilities that are desirable. Even then there would be no guaranty against penalties for recklessness and incompetence. These evils are apparent on every hand, and add tremendously to the normal dangers confronted in motoring.

There is too much preventable blood spilling going on to warrant any acceptance of existing conditions as inevitable. However zealous law enforcement authorities may be, however excellent traffic regulations may become, the greatest single preventive of automobile tragedies is keen and alert individual responsibility. Drive more slowly and drive more carefully is a rule, which, if followed, still is potent to keep down the number of accidents and the mortality rate they are causing.

THE SILK HAT BRIGADE

From London comes a rare bit of news and one that provides the germ of an idea for America, an idea that might perhaps save thousands of lives. The idea is to wear a high silk hat to avoid being run down by automobiles.

The London dispatch declares that silk hats are the best insurance against being run over by a motorcar in a London traffic jam, and offers logical arguments to prove it. Bus and taxi drivers generally regard the stovepipe hat as the insignia of a noble lord, and no self-respecting driver could dream of running down such a superior person. The mere fact that bank clerks and messengers wear high silk hats far more frequently than do the noble lords has not dimmed the lustre of the old tradition, and in the swirl at Piccadilly Circus and Trafalgar Square traffic cops always halt traffic for members of the high hat brigade. It is even said that in less congested districts where there are no traffic policemen, the drivers themselves halt for the magical silk hat.

All very well for England where they have had lords and all that sort of thing for the humble taxi driver still to venerate, but in America what can we do about it? We very much fear that the person who dons a high silk hat and tries to stun traffic at Fifth Avenue and Forty Second Street in New York, or Michigan Boulevard in Chicago will find himself a target instead of an object of respect and deference. American taxicab drivers have the world's record for direct hits. They fear and respect no man. To them a pedestrian is a pedestrian, a worm of the earth, to be run over with impunity and laughed to scorn whenever possible. After canvassing the situation, we fear that the idea will not do for us. The silk hat may grant traffic immunity in England, but here it would certainly not be effective.

MEMORIAL DAY

Today, Decoration Day, has been dedicated by the American people to those who have given their lives for their country. It is the one day of the year on which this hustling and restless nation pauses to pay sincere tribute to the men who have died in its defense. It is a day of memories; a day on which our minds wander back to distant wars and half-forgotten battles; a day on which we remind ourselves anew that many thousands of men have found our flag and our homeland so precious that they have willingly died for them.

And so, today, we pay our tribute with the thought that we are, in the only way possible, doing something for the men who have fought and died for us. Yet as a matter of fact the homage that we pay today is something that means far more to us than it does to them. The men who gave their lives at Chapultepec, Chancellorsville, Santiago, in the jungles of the Philippines and on the shell swept slopes of the Argonne, do not need our tribute. They have, as we put it, gone to their reward and there is little we can do for them.

The services that American soldiers rendered on the battlefields of two hemispheres did not cease there. They left for us memories of heroism and self-sacrifice, of gallant manhood and open-handed courage; and we, remembering, are better for it. We should turn the lessons and experiences of yesterday to guide today and tomorrow, so that they shall not have died in vain. We should reconsecrate ourselves today to more earnest effort that they who come after us shall have the chance to live their lives in full contentment and happiness. We should rededicate ourselves to carry on to the goal of universal peace and justice. We should ever be mindful of the heritage left by these heroes and whenever sinister influences or agencies working for the overthrow of our government rear their ugly heads, we should promptly crush them. This is the least and yet the most that we can do—that we build our memorial to our gallant defenders in our lives.

HITCH-HIKING

Hitch-hiking, already under fire by the automobile clubs of the country, has sustained another hit in the act of the United States Army in deciding to issue only the actual railroad tickets to the thousands of youths who will be given transportation to the Citizen's Military Training Camps this summer. Heretofore the training camp candidates have been permitted to collect their fare in cash at the rate of five cents a mile for the trip to camp and return.

By hitch-hiking, or the use of their own cars, motorcycles, or bicycles, many saved the railroad allowance and fattened their supply of spending money for ice cream, extra movies and other attractions. The chief reason assigned by the Army officials for the substitution of tickets for the cash allowance was that the change permits the government to take advantage of the excursion rates, thus saving considerable money that will be diverted to increasing the camp facilities to accommodate a greater number of applicants than originally planned.

As a measure of governmental economy it is in a class by itself for it kills two birds with one stone in discouraging the hitch-hikers who have become such a nuisance along the highways. At every corner you meet them, jerking their thumbs in the direction they want to go, eager to travel—at the expense of some one else.

The movement gaining momentum against hitch-hiking is based primarily in the realization of the autoist that he takes a great chance in giving rides to all. The laws of the various states hold the driver and the owner of the car responsible financially for any one who is injured in the car. Thus a hitch-hiker, who might be injured while being given a ride, can sue and recover damages from the driver who befriended him. It is too risky a business and every means should be taken to discourage the hitch-hiking fad.

Health Talks

BY WILLIAM BRADY, M. D.

Noted Physician And Author

Dr. Brady will answer all signed letters pertaining to health. Writer's names are never printed. Only inquiries of general interest are answered in this column, but all letters will be answered by mail if written in ink and a stamped self-addressed envelope is enclosed. Requests for diagnosis or treatment of individual cases cannot be considered. Address Dr. William Brady, in care of this paper.

AGE LIMIT FOR PHYSICAL PUNISHMENT

Stanley Blanton, the child training expert, says in an article in Hygiene for October, 1926, that as a rule the child should not be given physical punishment before the second year nor after the eighth year of age if the child's intelligence is normal.

Recently I advised in this column that children 15 or 16 years old should be whipped in punishment for smoking. In advising this I believe I am giving good health advice—the effect of tobacco upon a child is unquestionably injurious to physical health, irrespective of any moral consideration. But I must confess that the preponderance of opinion among readers is against me here, if the letters I have received about this are a fair criterion.

Now here is a difficult question. The suggestion to whip the child in his or her teens for smoking was made two or three times in answers to questions from readers, and once in a formal article in my department. The reaction from this amounted to a score of letters deplored and disapproving such advice, and two or three commanding or approving the idea of "beating out of them." What am I to conclude from such a reaction? How much weight should I allow for the common custom of not voting unless we have a protest to enter?

A New York attorney writes: "I suppose I have not missed reading your daily article 10 times in 10 years. Your logic would meet the highest standards of the legal profession. As to the article about thrashing for cigaret smokers, I believe a thrashing would make some cigaret smokers decide that they had better not get caught at it again, and they wouldn't, but they might become determined not to stop smoking. They would dread the beating, but not the smoking."

This same objection was made by most of the readers who filed protests. Some of them also called me a brute.

I feel somewhat defeated, and it's a miserable feeling. A school teacher who has children in their early teens in her classes, and whose views on discipline seems sound, assures me that the effect of whipping would be precisely the course the lawyer mentions. It reminds me of the time I got into the wrong church. Sittings were two bits and I had only 15 cents in change.

Studiously, briefly and, I fear half heartedly, I bob up with this question: If a whipping has that effect on a child of 16, is not all punishment objectionable on similar grounds? Or if the punishment is of such mild or gentle character that it fails to make the child decide not to get caught at the offense again, why punish the child anyway?

Everybody knows how ridiculous it is for a mother to "speak sharply" to a child that kicks her shin or commits some similar offense. The child must be punished immediately and the punishment must give the child as much pain or unhappiness as may be necessary to blot out the joy or satisfaction the child has taken in kicking mother on the shin.

However, none of the readers who take issue with this principle suggests how the cigaret smoking tendency in a child should be corrected. Certainly it must be corrected if the health of the child is worth cultivating.

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS

Unfortunate Baby

Do babies ever have chronic bronchitis? The baby is 11 months old, loose cough, ... mother thinks baby is tuberculous and wishes to have the tuberculin test made, but father objects to introducing any foreign substance into the baby's blood and wants to follow Dr. Brady's advice and put the child outdoors regardless of the weather. . . . (Mrs. W. F. C.)

Answer—Young infants rarely have chronic bronchitis, but more frequently have tuberculosis. In fairness to the infant the mother and father should compose their differences and follow the advice of the physician.

DAUGHTERS OF MIDAS

by Anne Austin

THIS HAS HAPPENED
BILLY WELLS, NYDA LOMAX, and WINNIE SHELTON, department store employees, are taken as wards into the home of their employer, T. O. CURTIS, for one year, because he wants to help them further their ambitions. Billy who wants to become a concert violinist, is the only one of the three who is sincerely ambitious, the other two having lied to enjoy T. O.'s generosity.

When the girls accidentally learn he intends adopting one of them the year is up, a battle ensues for his affections. Billy is unwillingly drawn into the secret contest, and this, coupled with her infatuation for DAL ROMAINE, nephew of MRS. MEADOWS, a hostess hired by Curtis, causes her to neglect her violin.

Through everything she tenderly remembers CLAY CURTIS, son of her benefactor, who has disintegrated himself and is living with the Wells family in the poor part of town, working in the Truman factory by day and writing music at night. Dal Romaine makes ardent love to Billy but urges her to keep their romance a secret. He calls on her at times when Curtis, who dislikes Romaine, and the others the absent, RALPH TRUMAN takes Billy through the automobile factory and there sees Clay, his sensitive drawn with nervous agony. She asks Ralph to leave her alone with Clay. She points out to Clay then that there is a certain cadence and rhythm in the noise of the big machinery and that the other men have caught it and are working in harmony.

Gradually he hears what she hears, peace comes to his tortured face, and the idea is born for his symphony, "The Song of Toll." When Ralph rejoins Billy, he takes her to the cafeteria and while there warns her that Romaine is not to be trusted, that he is playing both Billy and Winnie. She runs from the cafeteria, leaving the astonished Ralph behind her.

NOW GO ON WITH THE STORY

CHAPTER XXXVI

When Billy ran out of the cafeteria, she found herself swept into a milling mass of factory and office employees, just released, by the stroke of five, from their work. She heard Ralph shouting to her, but she ran on, half borne by the crowd of overalled men, pushing toward the long line of buses waiting to take them to the city of Colfax.

"If I can only find Clay!" she moaned. "Clay! Clay!"

Men start at her curiously, made way for her respectfully, wonderingly.

"Looking for someone, sister?" a kind, heavy voice asked.

She whirled to face an elderly, stoop-shouldered giant of a man, whose eyes were gravely kind.

"I want to find Clay Curtis," she gasped. "He—he boards at my house and I'm going home with him—in the bus. I—I thought it would be fun," she added, with a pathetic attempt to appear natural.

The old man cupped his hands about his mouth and shouted, "Curtis! Hey, Curtis!"

Before Billy could lose her courage, Clay came pushing his way through the mob of men. When he saw her, he grasped her arm in a matter-of-fact way, smilingly thanked the old man who had helped her, and pushed a way for them to a bus.

"I've got to go home with you, Clay," she panted. "Don't ask questions. I'll explain later. Just let me go home with you."

"Of course. Your mother will be glad to see you." His voice was casual. "Hop up! It's sort of jolly, but I guess you're a good sport."

As the big bus lumbered out of the factory grounds a few minutes later, Billy caught sight of Ralph Truman, hatless, overcoatless, running frantically from one building to another, looking for her.

"One of them there Cinderella gals that old man Curtis is keepin' up at the mansion," she heard a laborer say to a companion, a leer on his greasy-streaked face.

Clay's hand, washed but still showing traces of grime and grease, closed over hers hard, protectively. They were standing almost in the middle of the big bus, swaying from looped straps, sweaty, overalled bodies bumping her with every lurch of the car.

"Let's get off here and walk. It's only a few more blocks to the house," Clay whispered.

He signaled to the driver and they left the coach, followed by a few subdued chuckles and a suggestive word or two.

"Mind telling me what happened, honey?" Clay asked quickly.

"I—I can't, Clay," she told him miserably, humbly. "It—it wasn't anything. Ralph did that made me run away. It was something he said about—about someone else. He—he tried to meddle in my affairs, and I couldn't stand it. But don't be angry with Ralph, Clay," she begged him hastily, as she felt his arm muscles harden under her clinging fingers. "He was only trying to help me—oh, I can't explain! But I simply couldn't see him again after he said—couldn't go on talking about it—" Her voice was becoming hysterical.

"Billy!" Clay took her clinging fingers from his arm and held her hand tightly between both of his. "You did something for me—and to me—today. You did for me what I couldn't do for myself. You—you held me, dear. I can work now, without breaking up into torn, bloody fits. I'm going to go back to my music, this very night. Remember what you said, about—about 'The Song of Toll'?" His voice was embarrassed but very earnest.

Billy nodded.

"Well, honey, that's going to be the theme of my symphony. I've been crazy to write a symphony, one with a real American theme. Can't you imagine it—the marvelous orchestration we can get into a thing called 'The Song of Toll'?" I'm going to begin writing it. I've had experience with symphony orchestras, you know."

"Of course you can do it, dear," she told him warmly, her own love traced fading into the background for a moment.

"And Billy, it came to me 'all of a sudden' as Mother Wells says, when you were standing there, that—I—I love you with all my heart. I—I can't talk about it very well, honey, but—maybe you know how I feel—why, I've been in love with you since that very first night when I walked into your house out of the dark and the cold, pulled in by the music of your violin. Funny how blind I've been."

Shyly, when he had released her, "I'm making enough now to support us."

"Three of us?" She could not keep the sharp edge of sarcasm off the words. "Oh, Clay, darling, it's no use. I admit I'd marry you tonight if we could manage it, so that I could escape—everything." She was thinking of Dal Romaine, and Winnie—how she hated Winnie Sheldon—and Nyda's sneaky venom—that whole house of dreadful intrigue.

"I'm making forty-two dollars a week now," he told her stubbornly. "You and your mother used to get along on twenty-two."

"And I could go back to work," she reminded him mockingly. "Go back to the Curtis Store, if T. O. would let me—which he wouldn't do, by the way—among the girls who hate me because I'm one of the T. O. Curtis Cinderella Girls. No Clay, it wouldn't do. I spent three hundred and ten dollars for clothes a couple of weeks ago in one morning. I couldn't go back to living in a cold little shack in Poplar street. I despise myself. I didn't think it was possible for any human being to change as much as I've changed in the last two months, but I have changed, and I'd be a cheat to pretend that I'd make a good wife for a working man—now."

"It—it I went back to Dad, reinstated myself, would you marry me?" he asked in a guarded, unemotional voice.

"Oh, Clay!" Her hands went to his shoulders, her fingers dug into the rough cloth of his cheap overcoat.

"If you would come, I'd be a rock foundation to her house of life, and when she had never ready had Dad. Dal and Annie—Dal and Winnie—Dal and Billy—oh, God! Then she felt that old need for him, for Dad, calling at her. It seemed to her that she could actually hear his voice calling her. She wanted to shout—"I'm coming, Dal! Coming!" She began to run. She did not realize that she was miles from the Curtis mansion until a taxicab pulled up at the curb and a voice urged her, "Taxi, lady!"

When she reached home at last, in a dazed, disheveled condition, a maid handed her a letter. "Mr. Romaine waited and waited for you, Miss Billy. When he left this for you."

LARGE CROWD PRESENT AT PLAY IN CHURCH

Approximately 500 people attended the presentation of the musical comedy, "Savage Land," at St. Joseph hall Friday evening. The play was presented by the mixed choir of the church for the benefit of the new parish of St. Theresa. About 25 young people took part. The Rev. Eugene Ruscher was dramatic and Prof. A. J. Thielas was musical director. Miss Florence Hitchcock directed the dances and Robert Krahnhold was stage manager. Miss Katherine Keller played several piano solos between acts.

enough to let her know when you're coming, so I can clear out. Goodby."

He strode away swiftly, leaving her collapsed against the trunk of the oak tree. She never knew how long she crouched there. She was dimly aware that men and girls, hurrying home to supper in the mean little houses along the street, stared at her in wonder.

After a long while she set her limbs in motion. It was horrible to have to go on living, when she had lost Clay, who had been like a rock foundation to her house of life, and when she had never ready had Dad. Dal and Annie—Dal and Winnie—Dal and Billy—oh, God! Then she felt that old need for him, for Dad, calling at her. It seemed to her that she could actually hear his voice calling her. She wanted to shout—"I'm coming, Dal! Coming!" She began to run. She did not realize that she was miles from the Curtis mansion until a taxicab pulled up at the curb and a voice urged her, "Taxi, lady!"

When she reached home at last, in a dazed, disheveled condition, a maid handed her a letter. "Mr. Romaine waited and waited for you, Miss Billy. When he left this for you."

(To Be Continued.)

Dal Romaine is called away on business. And, oddly, Winnie goes away at the same time for a weekend visit.

Why, I didn't know what was the matter with me, even when I proposed to you before you went to live at Dad's."

"If you'd known then that you loved me, I'd have married you." Billy told him a voice so low and sad that he could hardly hear the words.

They had stopped on a dark corner, and Billy leaned weakly against the lumpy trunk of an oak tree.

"It is too late now, dear!" He took her hands and touched her fingers with his lips. "Oh, Billy, I love you so much! Don't you love me at all?"

"I did love you, Clay," she answered, in an uneven, husky voice, for tears were slipping down her cheeks.

"I loved you so much that I prayed over you—that night—when I held your head in my arms, you remember? I—I—I prayed, Clay, I prayed you would love me as I loved you." Her voice was dragged with hopelessness.

He could not answer her for a moment, but he bowed his head very low above her hands against his heart.

"Then Clay, I—I went away, and something happened to me." I became terribly infatuated with someone else—"

"Is he such a fool as not to love you?" Clay demanded harshly.

"Oh, he loves me—in his way," she acknowledged, wearily, "but it's such a consuming, restless, agonizing thing, this being in love—with this particular man." She could not utter his name to save her life. "I want to love you again, Clay. Oh, that's not putting it right! The old thing is that I do love you, underneath this fever, this madness. I am more at peace with you than with anyone else in the world. I want to live with you always, work with you, play music with you, dream with you."

"Then we'll get married, and you'll forget all about this other chap, who doesn't make you happy." Clay laughed exultingly.

He kissed her, and she was surprised and ashamed to find that her lips wanted to cling to his, that passion and tenderness surged in her heart for him. But there was none of the wildness of longing with which she clung to Dal Romaine, none of the sharp ecstasy that was compounded of passion and pain and doubt and fear.

"We'll get married," he repeated.

"If I can only find Clay!" she moaned.

"Clay! Clay!"

Men start at her curiously, made way for her respectfully, wonderingly.

"Looking for someone, sister?" a kind, heavy voice asked.

She whirled to face an elderly, stoop-shouldered giant of a man, whose eyes were gravely kind.

"I want to find Clay Curtis," she gasped. "He—he boards at my house and I'm going home with him—in the bus. I—I thought it would be fun," she added, with a pathetic attempt to appear natural.

The old man cupped his hands about his mouth and shouted, "Curtis! Hey, Curtis!"

Before Billy could lose her courage, Clay came pushing his way through the mob of men. When he saw her, he grasped her arm in a matter-of-fact way, smilingly thanked the old man who had helped her, and pushed a way for them to a bus.

"I've got to go home with you, Clay," she panted. "Don't ask questions. I'll explain later. Just let me go home with you."

"Of course. Your mother will be glad to see you." His voice was casual. "Hop up! It's sort of jolly, but I guess you're a good sport."

As the big bus lumbered out of the factory grounds a few minutes later, Billy caught sight of Ralph Truman, hatless, overcoatless, running frantically from one building to another, looking for her.

"One of them there Cinderella gals that old man Curtis is keepin' up at the mansion," she heard a laborer say to a companion, a leer on his greasy-streaked face.

Clay's hand, washed but still showing traces of grime and grease, closed over hers hard, protectively. They were standing almost in the middle of the big bus, swaying from looped straps, sweaty, overalled bodies bumping her with every lurch of the car.

"Let's get off here and walk. It's only a few more blocks to the house," Clay whispered.

He signaled to the driver and they left the coach, followed by a few subdued chuckles and a suggestive word or two.

"Mind telling me what happened, honey?" Clay asked quickly.

"I—I can't, Clay," she told him miserably, humbly. "It—it wasn't anything. Ralph did that made me run away. It was something he said about—about someone else. He—he tried to meddle in my affairs, and I couldn't stand it. But don't be angry with Ralph, Clay," she begged him hastily, as she felt his arm muscles harden under her clinging fingers. "He was only trying to help me—oh, I can't explain! But I simply couldn't see him again after he said—couldn't go on talking about it—" Her voice was becoming hysterical.

Now The Green's Have It--Shades Of Blue So Popular In Early Spring Are Ousted By Twenty-Five Different Shades Of Green

BY BETSY SCHUYLER
NEW YORK.—That threatened to crowd all other colors off the fashion map early in the spring, seems about to succumb to the smart New Yorkers' preference for green.

Everybody I turned this past week saw green! Not only in the budding trees and blossoming window boxes, but in pretty frocks, graceful evening gowns, suits and coats.

Perhaps the happiest use of green for costumes this season was the choice the former Jennet Remond Lloyd made for her bride's frocks for her wedding to Harold Hawley Myers.

GREEN BACKGROUND FOR BRIDE

Of apple-green chiffon and filmy lace of matching color were they fashioned. Little bows were at the deep borders of the skirt were at the lace worn with green horseshoe band picture hats with smashing bows of soft velvet ribbon. They made a most delightful background for the classic white of the bride's costume.

Dancing at the Plaza Carlton the other evening was another charming green creation—enhancing the beauty of Nancy Glave. It was a short frock, with its tiers shading from a bright green through three tones to a soft green.

SHOPPING SWEATER

I noted Miss Gertrude Sanford shopping on Park Avenue in a smart Nile green sweater suit with fox fur neckpiece.

Soft pastel stripes on the green background ran around the jumper portion of the costume and up and down the skirt.

Green has its advocates among the smart debs, too. Meeting at the home of Mrs. Hubert Passett to plan for another of those benefit dinners that keep society on the wings, was one whole davenport of young beauty garbed in springlike green.

Dorothy Root preferred a deep tone of green flat crepe for her two-piece costume with its front skirt with a corded pleated. Rose beige faced the open-neck and the cutest little metal buttons gave a note of black and color to the front.

LIGHTER THAN NILE

Her black felt had an unusually high crown, quite becoming to her interesting face.

A green that was lighter than Nile,

GERALDINE SHEPARD

ELIZABETH BASSETT

but not quite mint, was Geraldine Shepard's choice. Her one-piece frock with its kick pleats in front and plain back had an unusual trimming-inserts fashioned of narrow bits of the goods making an openwork design. The collar of this insertion was faced through with a wide black satin ribbon that formed the tie.

Elizabeth Bassett wore a leaf green crepe-backed satin frock which had a tiered skirt of knife pleats and a Vionnet neckline with a half dozen or so pearl bullet buttons running down the left side. She wore pink and her corded silk turban of a light green had a little pearl ornament.

UMBRELLA COAT, PURSE COMBINATION

Green accessories often accompany a beige or gray costume. I noted a beige or gray costume. I noted several spring dressed women with a green umbrella, rain coat and purse combination. Miss Hunter Marsden was decidedly chic on the links in a white costume with green shoes and matching hose.

So popular, in fact, has green become that there are now said to be 25 different and entirely new green tones in the color card for summer. Practically every costume will have its green touch—even if it is only in the leaves of the inevitable flower that adorns practically every shoulder.

Mae Eller

Pietro Yon recently appointed organist at Saint Patrick cathedral, New York City, is here represented with two movements from his best sonata.

In popularity and emotional appeal, it ranks with the best of modern works.

"The Bells of St. Anne de Beaupre" ..... Hollins

"Hymn Like Theme" making use of the solo and echo organ and chimes, and working into a powerful climax.

"Adagio" (from Sixth Symphony) ..... Widor

"Variations de Concert" ..... Bonnett

Elbert Smith

The bells of St. Anne de Beaupre by Alexander Russell is one of the set of the St. Lawrence sketches. The chimes of St. Anne church, Beaupre, Canada (actual notes)—Gathering of the Faithful—Chanting of the Choir—The Procession—the Miracle—Benediction—Bells in the distance.

The Widor Toccata is the most striking movement ever penned by this great Frenchman, as well as the most brilliant Toccata written.

Memorial Day...
pay them the tribute of music

They are living in the past as never before—these warriors of other days. Their faltering, snow-white ranks are melting away before the march of the years.

Their songs recall the high, brave moods of '61. They will thrill you—give you and your children a more profound understanding of what Memorial Day means to these old men.

THE MIRTH OF A NATION:

Dear Mr. Juddell:

Janet had black snappy eyes and dark, luxuriant hair.

Life seemed very bright to me when she consented to take in a musical comedy with me. The comedian came out and pulled a mild wisecrack, and a feminine shriek pierced the air.

It was Janet—laughing!

She laughed for about two minutes, and then began to choke, and an usher invited us to go somewhere else. Chuckling garrulously!

THAT'S why I prefer blondes! —Giant F. Markwick.

Dear M. F. J.:

Naomi was the prettiest blonde I had ever met and boy! I certainly preferred her!

I called on her at her house four or five times, and then took her out to a movie.

Having left her at home after the show, I started down the street. I remembered having left my umbrella there, so I went back for it.

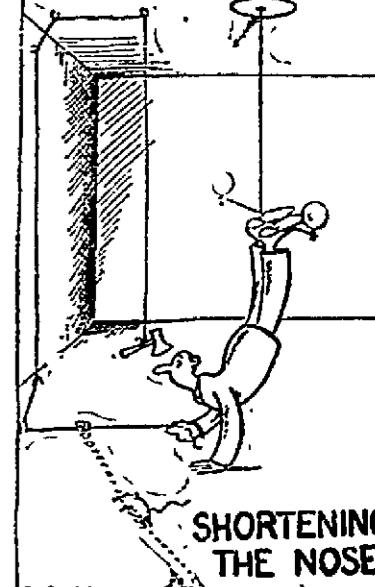

As I stepped on the porch I heard her mother say: "So he took you to a show. Well, well. That must have been a rare treat."

"Rare," said Naomi, "it's entirely unprecedented. He's been coming here a month and this is the first time he's spent a nickel."

ORANGE TRACKMEN WIN FINAL MEET FROM MANITOWOC

Shieldsmen Keep Slate Clean For 1927 By 64-54 Triumph Over Ships

Johnston Scores Three Firsts; Rain Spoils Field Events in Contest

Slams in the shotput and discus events and an unexpected eight point in the low hurdles gave Coach Joseph Shield's Appleton high school track and field squad a victory over Manitowoc high school's strong team runnerup in the Valley conference meet this year, Saturday afternoon at Manitowoc. The final score of 64-54 kept the Orange 1927 slate clean with victories in three dual meets, including one with Wausau, 1927 northern Wisconsin champs, a quadrangular meet with three Valley conference foes and the annual Valley team competition. The showing of the Orange this year fed Coach Shields to declare that with the same success next year he will enter a team in the Stevens Point Normal and state meets.

The meet was held in a driving rain which started just before the first event and inside of a half-hour the field was a mass of mud while the athletes strove for honors in a steady downpour all afternoon. In spite of the heavy track many good marks were made in the track events. Appleton was handicapped in the javelin and high jump by the rain and lost several otherwise sure points. Until the final two events the meet was a tossup with one team forging ahead on one contest, only to fall back on the next and then rise again.

Pete DePolo, winner of the 1925 race, and Leon Duray were aligned with Lockhart in the first starting row Monday by virtue of qualifying their ears at 119 and 118 miles an hour.

Tommy Milton, veteran master of the racing road, was figured as Lockhart's most dangerous challenger. After an absence of more than a year, Milton returned to the racing game to drive a car entered by Cliff Durant, millionaire Detroit sportsman. Durant was unable to start because of illness and Milton, the designer of the racer, consented to pilot it, hoping to achieve his third victory in the Indianapolis classic. He is the only driver who has achieved two victories in the race.

The winners of Monday's event must catch the two and one half mile brick oval 200 times to win $25,000.

The course is one of the most treacherous out-to-in tracks in America. It is rough and bumpy and has four turns around which the racers speed at a record breaking clip.

All of the cars are straight eight, equipped with superchargers and other scientific devices to increase speed. The engines are limited to 912 cubic inches piston displacement and are no larger than the power plant of a Ford.

The race aside from the sporting character is regarded as the laboratory of the automotive industry. Ten of the cars will be powered with front-wheel drives and their performance will be watched by makers of passenger automobiles.

The crowd which witnesses Monday's event was an extraordinary one. The spectators started lining up against the gates last Friday in order to be in line for good positions when the gates were thrown open. At dusk Sunday night thousands were camped outside the 250-acre racing plant.

They spent the night sleeping in their cars and thousands spent Sunday night in the machines parked in downtown streets.

As the gates were opened the sun was trying valiantly to break through the clouds which early in the day threatened rain.

150,000 INVADE INDIANAPOLIS FOR 500-MILE BATTLE

Frank Lockhart, California, Favorite to Win Monday's Race.

Indianapolis, Ind.—An army of 100,000 to 150,000 persons, each seeking a thrill, began its march to the gates of the Indianapolis Motor Speedway Monday to witness the greatest of all automobile races, the annual 500-mile grind for prizes totaling $100,000.

The race, starting at 10 o'clock, attracted a field of 33 drivers, the pick of the stars of America and Europe. For the first time in years there were no foreign cars in the lineup. Frank Lockhart, a California youth remained the last minute favorite to win Monday's race as a result of his victory in the 1926 event, and his quantitative speed trials. Lockhart astounded the speedway fans by his achievement in setting the elimination pace at a quarter of a second better than two miles a minute, the greatest speed ever attained on the Indianapolis speedway. He qualified his car at 129 miles an hour.

PHIL MCGRAW MAY MEET SAM MANDELL

Bout for Title This Summer Would Be First in Michigan in Six Years

Detroit, Mich.—If Phil McGraw, the Detroit Florist, meets Sammy Mandell of Rockford, Illinois here this summer for Mandell's light weight title, a match that appears all but arranged, it will be Michigan's first title scrap since Dempsey knocked out the late Billy Miske at Benton Harbor six years ago.

Like the Dempsey-Miske fight, the promised lightweight match will be promoted by Lloyd Fitzsimmons, the Benton Harbor boxer, who built arenas at Benton Harbor and at Michigan City, Ind., for his boxing enterprises. The Benton Harbor bout was probably the only time Michigan authorities for the ensuing few years frowned upon open air for the matches.

McGraw stands ready for the Mandell match seven weeks ago conditional on defeating Chucky Clark of Holyoke, Mass., last Friday. McGraw met the condition with a lop-sided victory over Clark, flooring him three times and outpointing him by a wide margin. Clark held two dozen over McGraw in the east.

ORANGE NETTERS WIN FROM MANITOWOC TEAM

Appleton high school's tennis team won its first dual match of the season Saturday morning at Manitowoc, beating the Manitowoc high squad in a contest staged in connection with the Manitowoc-Appleton dual track and field meet in the afternoon. Four singles matches were played and the Orange netters took three of the four. The doubles were called off because of rain.

Team of Appleton beat Ashby, 6-2, 6-2; Carlson, Appleton, beat the Manitowoc ace, 6-2, 6-2; Tamm, Appleton, beat Kutz, 6-2, 6-2; and Dennis, Appleton, lost the only match to Kutz, 6-1, 6-1.

BUTTE DES MORTS LIKELY PLACE FOR STATE GOLF MEET

Billy Sixty Says All Local Club Has to Do Is Issue an Invitation

Prospects that the invitation of the Butte des Morts country club to hold the 1927 state amateur tournament will be accepted are verified by Billy Sixty, well-known golfer and golf scribe of an Milwaukee newspaper in a story which he wrote for the Sunday edition of the paper. Sixty says the meet may be held at Maple Bluff, Milwaukee, because a member of the state board says that the greens of the local course have suffered considerable "winter kill." He says, however, that the place will be definitely settled at the annual meeting of the Wisconsin State Golf Association on June 6 and that the Appleton representatives will say at that time whether the meet is wanted or not. Inasmuch as the invitation, which Billy evidently had not yet heard about, was extended by the local club this week, there is little doubt, based on his story, that it will come here, as only the invitation was needed.

Washington seems insistent on having a shotput named "Buddy." They've ordered "Buddy" Dean, from Virginia Poly, to report as soon as possible. Dean is said to be a sweet youngster on a ball diamond.

The Nats also asked Sam Hermann of Bethany to be in their camp within the next few days.

Brocklyn has found a good prospect in Taylor college, the same place the White Sox found Ted Lyons. He is a left-handed pitcher named Troy Stal-

The Red Sox are to be joined by Pat Moulton, an Alabama Poly football and baseball star. Moulton is a husky hauler.

The Giants already have Pitcher Henry Jones of Florida with them.

Indie Tommy Sewell, Alabama, is going to the Cubs, and Pitcher Andy House, St. Mary's (California), to the Pirates.

Vic Hanson of Scranton is one of the most sought after collegians in the east, and will probably report to some club soon after graduation. That club is believed to be one of the New York clubs.

This isn't certain, because the annual meeting of the Wisconsin State Golf Association doesn't take place until June 6—a week from Monday—at the Blue Mound club here and at that time the business of selecting a course will be definitely settled.

The Butte des Morts representative will say at that time whether the tourney is wanted or not.

Should it not go to Appleton, the Maple Bluff links would seem to be the logical place to hold it. By the rotative system of dealing out state tournaments used by the Wisconsin body Maple Bluff would be next in line. Either course could handle the event nicely, both being excellent golf tests. Butte des Morts perhaps a bit more rigid than Maple Bluff.

COLLEGE DIAMOND STARS TO MAJORS

Many Rah-Rah Boys Report for Trials at End of School Careers

Milwaukee—There will be no restrictions on motors or on the number of entries for the first automobile race program of the season at the State Fair Park track, Sunday afternoon, June 5, according to the Secretary M. L. Popp of the Lake Shore Racing Assn.

"The six races scheduled on that day are open to the world," said Popp, "and anybody with a racing car is eligible to compete. We have inced all restrictions so as to get the best and fastest drivers here."

The list of entries was increased to 25 during the last few days when drivers from Chicago sent in their entry blank to the association. More than a dozen Windy City racers will be on hand in addition to half a dozen from points outside of Chicago. Close to 50 cars will face the starter in the six races.

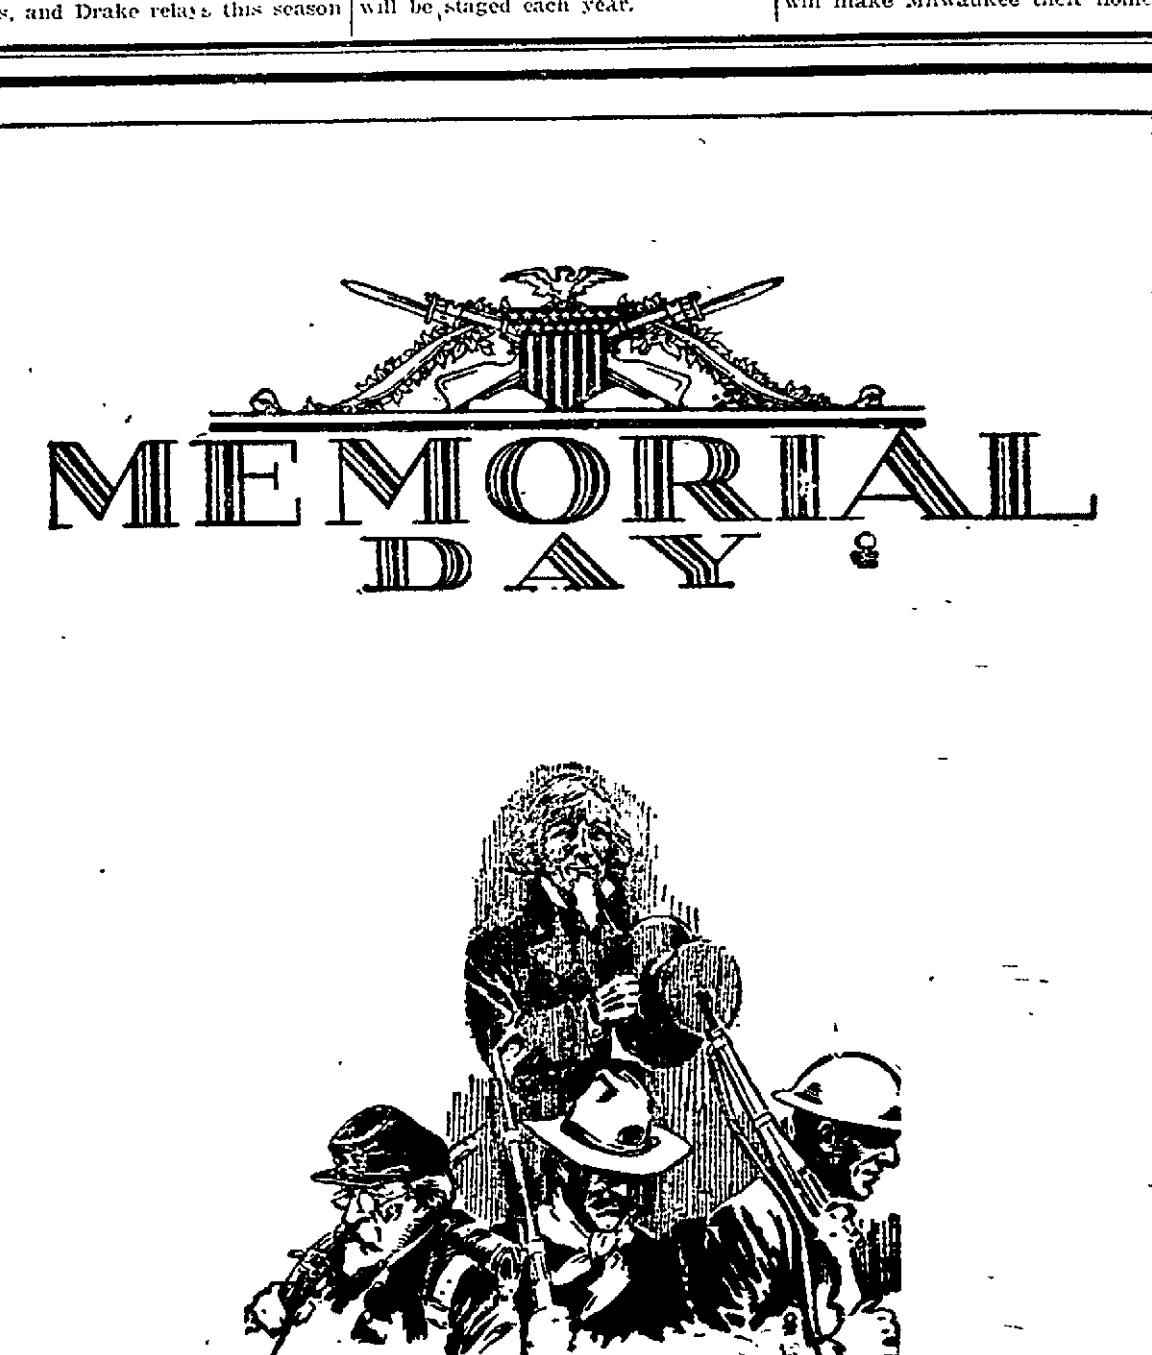

Time trials will start at 1:30 and during the running there will be a band concert. High city and state officials including Gov. F. R. Zimmerman and Mayor D. W. Hoan have accepted invitations to attend.

In the event of rain the races will be held the following Sunday.

John Nichols, of Sheboygan, one of the best known automobile and race horse starters, will officiate and will be assisted by a competent staff of officials.

TWO GREAT MARQUETTE ATHLETES TO GRADUATE

Milwaukee—When Marquette university confers 550 degrees on the 1927 senior class at commencement exercises Wednesday night, June 8, two of the greatest athletes who have ever worn the blue and gold of Marquette will be graduated. LaVern Dilweg, Milwaukee, who captained the 1924 Marquette football team which defeated the Navy and who was named at end of Walter Eckersall's first all-American team in 1925, will receive the degree of bachelor of laws, while Melvin Shimek, Kenosha, captain of this year's track and cross country teams and the greatest distance runner in the midwest this season, will be awarded the degree of bachelor of science in business administration. Both will make Milwaukee their homes.

WOMAN'S CLUB ENDS YEAR WITH BALANCE, TREASURER REPORTS

Expenses Total $10,116.55 and Receipts Amount to $11,121.50

Cost of operating the Appleton Woman's club the past year was $10,116.55, and revenue was $8,719.02, according to the annual report of the treasurer, Mrs. M. C. Hiltorf, included in the composite report of the club recently published. A balance May 4, 1926, of $1,402.48 brought the total receipts to $11,121.50 and left a balance this year of $1,004.65. Since the books were closed $505 of the $628 in unpaid pledges has been paid, the treasurer stated.

The recreation department reached 1,261 persons in its work. This is a larger number than in other years because of the swimming classes and the Vocational school club which was organized this year, it was stated. There were 35 members in the music department, 25 in the county department, and 51 in the Business and Professional Women's club. Each are separate departments sponsored by the Women's club, and each has charge of its own expenses.

Revenue from memberships this year was $885 and from campaign subscriptions, $7,342.50. The health department took in $390.63 and its expenses were $906.32, leaving a balance of $1,424.37. Donations contributed a total of $172.60; luncheons and banquets, $1,462.94; the county department, $41.06; concerts, lectures and entertainments, $1,450.50; departmental expense, $8; the girl scout committee fund, $100.85; salary paid by vocational school, $200, and miscellaneous, $12.42.

Salaries paid to two recreation directors, the office secretary, and one executive secretary totaled $5,870.70. Furnishings cost the club $113.73; campaign expenses, $72.59; janitor, $300; fuel, $827.72. Swimming receipts were $726.54 and expenses were $739.37, leaving an expense to the club of $72.83. Repairs and remodeling amounted to $223.33; papers and magazines, $16, and dues to the National Federation of Women's clubs, $123.

Scout activities cost $10.75, their revenue of $500 just failing to meet the expenses of $600.75. The teachers party given by the board of education, the Knights of Pythias, and the club cost $19.75. Interest was $157.50; advertising, $45.79; insurance, $229.88; and special taxes, $4.30. The recreation department took in $515.14, and spent $823.73, leaving a deficit of $31.59. Other miscellaneous items were included in the report.

The detailed report of the recreation departments shows placed enrollment in the separate groups as follows: Cottage, 175; Onaway camp, 121; tennis, 23; baseball, no report; volleyball, six; basketball, 21; swimming, 279; gymnasium, 13; bowling, 48; social dancing, eight; handcraft, 21; bridge, 19; Italian hemstitching, five; ukulele, 11; girl scouts, 118; Eta Beta Pi club, seven; K. W. Y. W. club, 11; Monday Night Social club, 14; dramatic workshop, 31; vocational school outdoor sports groups, 56; vocational school dramatic club, 20; vocational school club made up of both the sports and dramatic groups, 26; Sports council, 25; attendance at social events was 1,261.

CONDUCTED CHEST CLINICS

The health department conducted free chest clinics each month with Dr. C. D. Boyd of Riverview Sanatorium as examining physician. Proceeds of the sale of pony Clubman seals by the department were $1,200.69, half of which went to the Wisconsin Anti-tuberculosis fund, and the remainder was kept here for furthering health projects. Mrs. William Nemacheck, chairman, reported. A chest clinic under the auspices of the association was held in January when 125 persons were examined. Free baby clinics were conducted in January, February, March and April under the direction of Dr. Sylvia Stuessy of the state health department.

Aid for the poor was one of the principal works done by the county department. Mrs. John Scheetz, chairman, reported. Cooking lessons by a food specialist from Madison were taken by the women.

The house committee, headed by Mrs. Clara McGowan, recommended that the clubhouses be redecorated this year. At a card party this spring $50 was made toward this fund. Few articles were purchased for the house during the past year, it was said.

Average attendance at the meetings of the Business and Professional Women's club meetings was 35, the president, Miss Linda Hollinbeck, reported. The chief work of the girls this winter was the sponsoring of a vocational guidance conference in conjunction with the Sports council.

The dramatic workshop of the recreation department is self-supporting, money for running expenses being raised by selling tickets for plays given during the winter months, the director Miss Elinor Strickland, stated. Groups of one-act plays were given during the year, and a three act play at Fischer's Appleton.

The vocational school dramatic club presented one act plays at special programs. The girls will continue through the summer.

A peace group was organized late this spring under the leadership of Mrs. J. S. Reeve. The women will study subjects relating to world peace and will start their program the fourth Thursday afternoon in September.

The art class will be resumed the first week in June, Mrs. Mark Catlin, chairman, reported. The principal event of their program was a lecture given by Mrs. Anita Willets Burnham of Hubbard Woods, Ill.

Sixty-five girls registered for general housework in the employment bureau managed at the club by the office secretary, Mrs. John Engel, Jr. Of these 14 are cooks, 28 nurses, practical and graduate, 59, cleaning, women; 48, girls who wish to care for children; 20, college girls who are recruited for various kinds of work; seven, waitresses; 25, mill and factory girls; 17, applicants for office positions; 12, sewing and mending women; and ten, waitresses.

In the past seven months, the agency has assisted every restaurant and first-class hotel in the city to secure help, the report stated. In addition to the calls received from Appleton women, there have been calls from Oshkosh, Forest Junction, Brillion, Hilliard, Neenah, Menasha and New London for various kinds of help. Girls living within a radius of 50 miles from Appleton have written seeking employment. One inquiry came from Cloquet, Minn.

The room registry is handled by the office secretary. All rooms are inspected before they are recommended to patrons, it was stated. Twenty-one persons were registered in the hand-work classes this year.

WISCONSIN ACCEPTS MEMORIAL BUILDING

Elderly Oshkosh Attorney Will Deliver Address at Green Bay Convention

This institution furnished a full quota and many more would have gone, had the emergencies demanded.

"When the World war broke, no educational institution in the nation voluntarily furnished a larger number of its young men that did this institution.

"But on all of these occasions the call for service was heard by others beyond the class room. Out from its alumni went hundreds of men who had obtained a technical training at the university, which made them powerful agencies in the winning of the war. Call the roll of men who have rendered service in the field of battle in France and you will find the record starred by the names of Wisconsin students and graduates. Call the roll of engineers and this institution's quota will be there. Call the roll of the scientists who rendered chemical learning and scientific aid to circumvent the ingenuity of the enemy and the names of Wisconsin's alumni and boys will be high on the list. It is a noble record which we honor today.

"Because of their unfaltering service this structure is to rise as their memorial. It is to be a cenotaph and a monument to those from this institution who placed the call of duty above the routine of the class room; it will stand here shimmering in the sun as a gold star to those who from campus and alumni gave their lives to perpetuate the ideals of freedom and liberty which have been inculcated here by leaders of independent thought like Barnard and Chardonneau, Bascom and Adams, Birge and Van Elise.

"But this building will have a still deeper significance. It is to be a Union—a common meeting place for the men of this campus—where they may sit down and pour out to each other their hopes—their dreams of the future—their noble ambitions to carry on for a greater service.

"Long has such an edifice been needed. The idealism of those who have graduated from this institution—the dream of many who left this seat of learning in the past quarter of a century—is now becoming a reality. Today we witness what a power there is in union and well directed energies.

"There true fraternalism shall rule. On entering these portals any inequalities of class vanish; within these rooms the cliques and groups meet away. Here will be union and equality for all who love this institution. It is to be symbolic of all the good for which this state is devoted.

"So it is with a feeling of pride that I accept in the name of this bounteous state this building to its group, the university campus, a gift from those who loved the institution and in that spirit it is tendered. It shall always be symbolic of that great force which moves and unites, confidence and understanding among all races and all men. And in that blending of cosmopolitan sentiments it will grow with the years to be the most beloved of all the buildings on this campus."

SERVICE MEN OPPOSE TRANSFER OF FUND

Menasha—Petitions are being circulated by former service men among those who contributed to the war chest fund protesting against that fund which amounts to $6,500 being transferred to the park commission to be used in building a new municipal bath building at the city park. More than 300 signatures already have been secured and as soon as the petitions are filled out they will be presented to the war chest committee.

The former service men, auxiliary of the Henry J. Lenz post of the American Legion, members of the Red Cross and park commission attended a meeting Saturday night at the city hall at which the present situation was informally discussed. At present the income from the fund is being used for war relief work and the former service men claimed it was raised for no other purpose. Both sides of the question were presented. The park commission will hold another meeting Tuesday evening to further discuss the matter.

Forty-five girls registered for general housework in the employment bureau managed at the club by the office secretary, Mrs. John Engel, Jr. Of these 14 are cooks, 28 nurses, practical and graduate, 59, cleaning, women; 48, girls who wish to care for children; 20, college girls who are recruited for various kinds of work; seven, waitresses; 25, mill and factory girls; 17, applicants for office positions; 12, sewing and mending women; and ten, waitresses.

In the past seven months, the agency has assisted every restaurant and first-class hotel in the city to secure help, the report stated. In addition to the calls received from Appleton women, there have been calls from Oshkosh, Forest Junction, Brillion, Hilliard, Neenah, Menasha and New London for various kinds of help. Girls living within a radius of 50 miles from Appleton have written seeking employment. One inquiry came from Cloquet, Minn.

The room registry is handled by the office secretary. All rooms are inspected before they are recommended to patrons, it was stated. Twenty-one persons were registered in the hand-work classes this year.

STAGE And SCREEN

BARRYMORE SETS A NEW MARK FOR SCREEN ROMANCE

Since Barrymore played the silken, sinuous lover in "The Jest" on the stage, his admirers wondered when he would get around to creating a similar character on the screen. In "The Jest," he seemed the living incarnation of Renaissance romance; passionate, daring, colorful, breathlessly handsome.

But "The Jest," because of its morbid subject matter, was hardly stuff for the screen. The Warner Brothers, however, found something, not only good as a Barrymore vehicle, but also a picture that would mark for screen romances at Fischer's Appleton today. Tuesday and Wednesday.

"Don Juan" is a stupendous melodrama of passionate beauty. From its first scenes in the Gothic-Moorish castle in Spain, through the colorful pageantry of Rome in the days of the Borgias, it breathes the dark mystery, the tense surprise, the incomparable fascination of the days of the gorgeous Borgias.

Through it all, Barrymore literally blazes a trail of passion. Never was he handsomer; never more supremely the master of creating romantic illusion. He loves gaily, ferociously; fiercely; he fights with reckless abandon; he thrills in every movement. His Don Juan is a masterpiece of romance.

"Don Juan" is a picture that is studded with brilliant names, the names of Estelle Taylor probably stands out most luminously. This dark beauty in a white blouse, makes of Lucia Morgia a character of memorable charm; an imperious beauty, who for some reason, is the only one that Don Juan refuses to make love to.

However, he makes love to all of the other ladies vigorously. And Mary Astor is undoubtably beautiful enough as the heroine, the blonde Adriana, to justify her as the great lover's final selection, to be borne off in a whirling climax to Don Juan's castle in Spain.

ONE INCREASING PURPOSE IS STRONG IN SUSPENSE AND THRILLING WITH INTEREST

Drama, virile with life, strong in suspense, and absorbingly interesting in its unfoldment, is the screen version of the Early Bench and Bar of Brown county at the same session.

The addresses will be given at a luncheon Thursday noon and will be followed by discussions on the questions, namely, "Should conviction of felony or of misdemeanor involving moral turpitude result in disbarment of ipso facto" and "A constitutional amendment permitting persons accused of crime to be called as witnesses."

Extra-territorial taxation, from the viewpoint of the taxpayer and of the state, is a leading topic at the afternoon session. J. J. Dempsey, attorney, will present the case for the taxpayer, while Judge F. E. Bump, of the attorney-general's office, will explain the position of the state.

Dunn Bates, of the University of Michigan law school will also be a speaker in the afternoon taking as his topic "Legislation and the Courts." W. E. Fisher, Stevens Point, will talk on "The Present Status of the Making Power."

The closing feature of the day will be a banquet at which Prof. Maynard, of the Oshkosh Normal will entertain the attorneys with "Humor of the Bench and Bar."

Friday's session will open with a breakfast in honor of Dean Bates by the Michigan graduates in attendance at the meeting. Committee reports will follow, an all-day convention will adjourn following election of officers at noon.

SEASON OPENS SUNDAY FOR SET-LINE FISHING

The season for set line fishing opened Sunday, according to John E. Hantschel, county clerk. Only a few licenses for this type of fishing have been issued. License forms for both set line fishing and for non-resident fisherman have been received by the clerk and are ready for distribution.

The longest ship canal in the world is the Suez, which is 100 miles long.

Menasha—Six local women escaped serious injury about 5 o'clock Friday afternoon when the large sedan in which they were driving skidded from the road at Slinger. Washington and tipped over in the ditch. They were returning via Highway 41, from Milwaukee, where they had attended a luncheon. Mrs. Chris Walter was driving. Other occupants were Mrs. Edna J. P. Hrbek, W. H. Pierce, C. E. Pierce, John G. Walter and Fred Walter. A party of Chicago tourists enroute to the northern part of the state assisted in getting the car back on the road and one member drove the automobile to Menasha.

It is to be hoped that the women will be all right.

Frank K. Viel and daughter, Vicki, of this city, and Miss Edna Hott of Marinette, left early Monday morning on a motor trip to Niagara Falls, N. Y., where they will visit for several weeks at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Austin Ely. They also will visit Anna Marie Woodward of De Pere. About 200 girls will dance in the spring festival at Toronto, Canada and Buffalo, N. Y.

At the time of the accident, the car was on the road and one member drove the automobile to Menasha.
